BRANCH OFFICE FOR
GAZETTE AT BAKER & SON.

For the convenience of its patrons and the public generally, the Gazette has established a branch office with J. P. Baker & Son, Drug Store, corner West Milwaukee and Franklin streets.

Care for classified advertisements, orders for papers, subscriptions and notices of this nature, as well as notices of news may be left at the Baker Drug Store, and will receive the same attention as if they were sent direct to the office.

Organ Puzzled Him.
When Russell was two years old he visited at his mother's home, where he was placed to sleep on the piano. A few days later he went to visit his grandparents who had an organ which he had been to learn. When he came back he found the organ stopped. He looked at it in disgust a moment, then he rushed back and tried again, this time with much force, and shouted: "Piano, wake up."

The Woman of It.
"The Law do you know he loves you if he hasn't told you so," queried the girl in the sports skirt. "Oh, replied the maid with the bargain-counter hair, 'I can tell by the way he looks at me when I am looking at him.'"

AT WORK ON BIG
INDIANA PAGEANT

He is president of South Bend's Indiana Centennial association, which has been at work for months on a tremendous historical pageant which will be presented early in October as the main feature of a celebration in recognition of the centennial of Indiana's admission to statehood and the semi-centennial of South Bend's incorporation as a city.

JEFFRIS TESTIFIES IN THE RIVER CASE

Is Questioned Closely Relative to River Conditions and Concerning the Rock River Block.

M. C. Jeffris testified for the defense today in the circuit court in the trial of the action brought by the state against George C. Sutherland for the abatement of nuisances in the Rock river. Mr. Jeffris' testimony was the last to be taken in the action which closed last week before Judge Fowler of Fond du Lac. Owing to the fact that Mr. Jeffris was busy with his senatorial campaign, arrangements were made to have his testimony taken today before the clerk of the court.

Mr. Jeffris was questioned concerning the conditions of Rock river during the time that he had been familiar with it, and relative to the Rock river block, owned by him and his brother, on the north side of Milwaukee street bridge. Mr. Jeffris testified that there had been no perceptible change in the shore line and that there had been no fill along the banks to amount to anything. The filling under the Merchants & Savings Bank was merely the closing up of an old raceway and had no effect on the river, he said.

Cross questioned by Attorney Jackson for the state, Mr. Jeffris told of some slight obstruction of grass which gathered beneath the Rock river block after the completion of the new Milwaukee street bridge. It gathered on wires which had been left stretched between the piles by the telephone companies, he said. When the wires were removed the grass readily floated away.

Asked whether the sidewalk on the east side of the Rock river block was on the line owned by him, Mr. Jeffris said it was. He denied that the east wall of the block was as far as their property right extended and that the platform encroached on property or space owned by C. S. Jackson.

Mr. Jeffris was called upon to describe the topography of the country drained by Rock river in the vicinity of Janesville. He said it could not be called abrupt, nor anything more steep than rolling.

CHAIRMEN MAY CUT WEEDS ALONG ROADS

Have Authority From County Highway Commissioner to Take Care of State Aid Highways.

Township chairmen in Rock county are authorized by the county road commissioner to see to it that weeds are cut along state and county aid highways. The expense of such work will be paid out of the county repair fund and certified by Mr. Moore. It is important that weeds be cut down along the roadside, especially in the vicinity of culverts and bridges in order that conveyances may readily see the obstructions. Township chairmen have also been authorized to have done any repair work which they find necessary and the expense for the same will be approved by Mr. Moore.

It is only through the co-operation of the township officers that the highway commissioner is able to maintain the state aid roads properly. On roads other than state aid roads, the township officers have the power to order weeds cut or such other repairs made as may seem necessary.

COUNTY HUNTERS IN RUSH FOR LICENSES

County Clerk's Office is Deluged With Applications From Anxious Hunters.

With the opening of the hunting season today the county clerk's office was deluged with applications for hunting licenses. The applicants came in person or sent in their papers by mail until the work piled up before County Clerk Lee and his deputy in amazing proportions. Aside from returning an electric return and attending to other office routine, 193 hunting licenses were issued on Wednesday. More than that number will be issued today and still the application papers will not be cleared away. The county clerk is straining every effort to accommodate the hunters and asks them to be patient if their permits are not forthcoming with the promptness anticipated.

BOARD OF CANVASS MEETS HERE FRIDAY

Will Convene Tomorrow Morning at Ten O'Clock in County Clerk Lee's Office.

The Rock county board of canvassers will meet Friday morning at ten o'clock at the court house in the office of County Clerk Howard W. Lee to canvass the results of the election of Tuesday.

As there were no close totals in instances of two or more candidates running for office, either state or county, and since there have been no contests yet made, it is felt that the work of the board will have no effect on results already announced. Expectations are that it will take some time to go over the returns from the entire county.

Y. M. C. A. OFFICERS MEET AT WAUKESHA

Annual Report Shows an Increase in Membership of the Y. M. C. A. of Twenty-Three Percent.

Sessions of the annual meeting of the employed officers of the Wisconsin Y. M. C. A. organization opened yesterday morning at Waukesha. The largest attendance ever recorded at an opening meeting of that association, Rock county was represented by Secretary Markham of the county organization of the Y. The report given on the year's work showed that the membership in the Y. M. C. A. in the whole state has increased twenty-three percent over last year. With this there was a concomitant development of all branches of the association work, together with a considerable increase in the range of activities entered into.

The feature of today's program will be the talk by I. E. Brown, the Dean of the Y. M. C. A. college at Chicago. Mr. Brown will have as his subject: "Manning the Association Field." The convention will close tomorrow noon.

17 NEW MEN ENLIST UNDER CAPT. JAEKE

Recruiting Campaign Being Pushed Hard by Officers of the Second Separate Company.

Captain Jaeke of the Second Separate Company of the Wisconsin National Guard reports good progress in the recruiting campaign which the officers of the company are pushing to secure an enlargement of the company for the Janesville company. Since the company returned from Camp Douglas seventeen new men have enlisted. This, with the number of prospects who have signed their desire to join the ranks of the militia, is most encouraging to all those who are interested in the success of the organization. The officers are anxious to enroll a class of thirty new men at once in order to get all the uniforms and equipment immediately.

As soon as the new class is completed, in about two weeks, the school for non-commissioned officers will be started. With a total enlistment of one hundred men the company will need six more corporals and two more sergeants.

"This should prove an added incentive to enlist at once," said Captain Jaeke this morning. "To all who are interested in the militia, I am sure these positions. No preferences will be shown by the commanding officers, but rather it is entirely a question of ability; those men who show themselves most capable to handle men will get the commissions."

"LONE STAR RANGER" NEXT SERIAL STORY

Opening Chapter of Novel By Zane Grey Will Be Published in Friday's Issue of the Gazette.

"The Lone Star Ranger," a story of the Texas frontier and Mexican border in the early seventies, written by Zane Grey, will be published serially in the Gazette beginning with Friday's issue. It is the first of the four in the outlaws and the Texas Rangers and has a swing and a punch to it that make it one of the best novels of its kind. There is plenty of action and vivid narrative which will commend the reader's interest. In addition to the adventure part of the novel, there is a fine thread of romance which will please.

LIVESTOCK MARKET HAS A SLOW DEMAND

Packers Are Not Eager to Buy Today's Offerings at Prevailing High Prices.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Chicago, Sept. 7.—A tendency toward a slow market with packers unwilling to buy at the prevailing quotations marked today's livestock trade. Hog receipts were 10,000 with quotations about at yesterday's average. Average of prices for cattle was lower and sheep showed tendency to decline. Following are quotations: Cattle—Receipts 7,000; market slow; native beef cattle 6.75@11.50; western steers 6.50@9.40; stockers and feeders 4.75@7.55; cows and heifers 3.50@9.50; calves 3.75@13.00. Hogs—Receipts 17,000; market dull, unchanged, 5c under yesterday's average; light 10.40@11.50; mixed 10.10@11.50; heavy 9.50@12.25; rough 9.85@10.25; pigs 6.50@9.50; bulk of sales 10.45@11.25. Sheep—Receipts 17,000; market weak; wethers 6.50@8.00; lambs, native 6.50@10.50.

Butter—Unchanged. Eggs—Higher; receipts 60,690 cases; cases at mark, cases included 20¢ and ordinary firsts 24¢@25¢; prime firsts 26¢@27¢.

Potatoes—Lower; receipts 35 cars; Jersey cobbles 1.40@1.45; Jersey Montanas 1.35@1.40; Jersey giants 1.25@1.30; Minn. Obios 1.00@1.25.

Poultry—Alive: Higher; fowls 16¢; springs 15¢. Wheat—Sept: Opening 1.52 1/2; high 1.53 1/2; low 1.51 1/2; closing 1.53 1/2; Dec: Opening 1.53 1/2; high 1.55; low 1.52 1/2; closing 1.55.

Milton Junction News

Milton Junction, Sept. 7.—A beautiful day greeted the people the first day of the sixth annual harvest festival. Fully three thousand were on the main street and at the park, rode on the merry-go-round and enjoyed the free attractions and band concert. There were fine exhibits of farm products, culinary, fancy work and fruits, which was larger than ever. The ice cream parlors, shows, cane stands, thumping machines and dance afforded everyone ample opportunity to spend their money and to have a good time. In the automobile parade Ralph Hasinger received first prize for the best decorated car. The races in the afternoon had a large number of competitors and proved very exciting.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Bond of Janesville, were guests of Mrs. B. O. Kelly yesterday.

The Kilham family had a family reunion at the J. P. Bauer home Wednesday.

EVANSVILLE HOMES ENTERED BY THIEVES

Sneaks Get Seventeen Dollars From Trousers of G. C. Roberts But Are Unsuccessful Elsewhere.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Evansville, Sept. 7.—The residence of G. C. Roberts, residing on Madison street, was entered some time Tuesday night and $17.00 taken. The money was in Mr. Roberts' trousers, locked in his room, which was entered without disturbing him.

Other houses in the same vicinity were also entered by an entrance attempted but nothing of value has been reported lost. An attempt to enter the residence of Mrs. Belle Lee on Monday night, was made on Monday.

The thief gained access to the woodshed. A large hole was cut in the screen door to allow the lock to be tampered with but their efforts in getting further into the house were apparently unsuccessful.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Wall and two children returned to their home at Evansville this morning after a several weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. John Wall and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tupper.

QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD

Q. In these days of pure food laws, don't you think that we are going out of our way to look for trouble? It certainly doesn't seem possible that if pure food were really menaced by dealers and manufacturers it should be left to the twentieth century to discover that such things have been going on. How did the people of Europe for centuries get along without pure food laws?

A. The people of Europe did not get along for centuries without pure food laws, and it was not left for the twentieth century to stir up a rumpus concerning food adulteration.

Food adulteration has been practiced since the beginning of time. Europe had pure food laws before America was discovered. No less an authority than Pliny declares that in Rome every form of food was adulterated.

Bakers mixed a white earth, soft to the teeth and sweetish to the taste, with their flour. This earth, terraalba, was obtained from a hill called Leucogee, between Pozzuoli and Naples.

In the latter part of the twelfth century false measures, false weights, false pretenses of all kinds were the instruments of commerce most generally in use.

No buyer would trust the word of a seller and there was hardly any class in which a man might not with reason suspect that his neighbor intended to rob or even murder him.

Luke Owen Pike in his "History of Crime" is the authority for this statement.

In Rome wine was much tampered with. Pliny declares that even the rich could not obtain the natural wines of Perugia which were adulterated in the cellars. The wines of Gaul were given an artificial color and flavored by means of aloes and other drugs.

Wines to this day they cure "sick" wines in France, Italy, Spain, Germany and Austria with chemicals. No sauterne comes to America free from sulphurous acid. The ale and porter that come from England contain sulphurous acid at this minute. The sulphurous acid stunt has been worked for centuries.

In the eleventh century bakers, brewers, pepperers, and wine makers were frequently accused of corrupt practices.

In England, as early as the fourth year of the reign of John, the production of bread was regulated by what was called the "Assize of Bread," which continued in force until 1286.

The punishment provided in the year 1562 for tampering with bread was as follows:

"If there be any that by false means useth to sell meale, for the first tyme, he shall tyme grievously punished; the second tyme he shall lose his meale; the third tyme he shall forswere the towne and so likewise the bakers that offend. Also the bouchers that sell messel porke or frozen flesh; for the first tyme they shall be grievously amerced, for the second tyme so offending, they shall have the judgment of the pillory, for the III. tyme they shall be committed to prison until ransomed, and the IV. tyme they shall forswere the towne and thus ought other transgressors to be punished; as cookes, forestallers, regrators of the markets when the cookes conserve roaste, bake or any otherwise dresse fyesh or flesche unwholesome for man's body."

In 1634 bakers who sold bread or cake which might be to the hurt and infection of man's body, or who used false weights or deceitful means, were whipped and driven from the town. In the reign of Edward I, bread was condemned that contained mineral matters. A fraud is recorded in "Memorials of London," by H. T. Riley, as follows:

"The bread taken from William Sommersete, baker, on the Thursday next before the feast of St. Lawrence, next before the feast of St. Lawrence, in the fifth year of the reign of King Edward II, was examined, and adjudged because it was found that such bread was putrid and altogether rotten, so that persons eating that bread would be poisoned and choked. The sheriff was ordered to take him and have him here on Friday next after the feast of St. Lawrence, then to receive judgment for the same."

In 1300 Ludwig von Langenhaus was sentenced to be led out of the city with his hands bound and a rope around his neck for adulterating wines.

In 1400 two wine sellers were branded with hot irons for sulphuring their wine casks and adding artificial color and sweet things to their wine.

In 1435 the taxmaster Christian Cortner and his wife were put in a cask from which they sold false wine and then exposed to the pillory.

At Riebeck on the Rhine, in 1482 a falsifier of wine was condemned to drink six quarts of the adulterated product. He died from the effects.

These facts were taken from the records of L. Wassermann, Mainz, 1879, which also tells us that in 1269 the law of Riepen punished a seller of adulterated honey with death.

Let us not assume that the United States is setting an example to Europe in the matter of pure food laws. The trouble in the United States is that the pure food laws are not enforced. Food adulteration is not a modern invention.

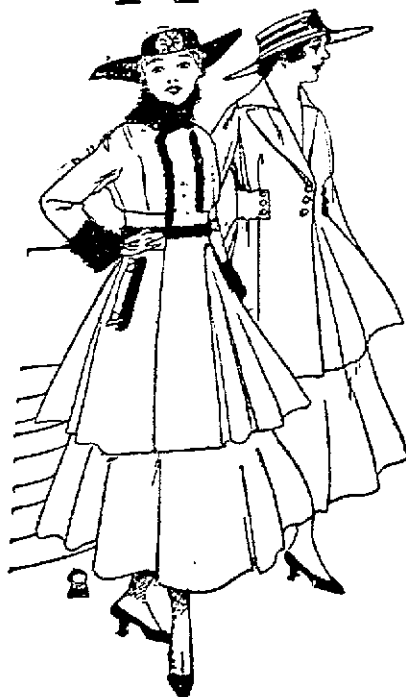

Human nature, just placing along in the same old way, and where laws are lax and their enforcement a joke the food fakers of modern times do exactly the same things that they did a thousand years ago, with only difference, being that they do them more cleverly.

PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION.

What is needed right now in Janesville is a practical demonstration of standing together on the part of all the varied interests of the city. The Janesville people are apparently failing to find out that the question of a practical demonstration is needed to rehabilitate the idea of pushing Janesville to the fore. The city has many advantages to offer to prospective business men and citizens. It is located in the center of the richest and most fertile agricultural belt in the middle west. It has practically unlimited electrical power to offer manufacturers. Its workmen own their own homes. Its schools are the best of citizens conversant with educational matters. Its churches cover almost every religious belief. Its streets are being rapidly improved. The buildings are being rapidly improved. The city is equipped with the latest of all conveniences and equipment. There is ample room for growth, for new homes to be erected, new factories to be established; there is a need for both at the present time. The banks are in a flourishing condition, showing that the wave of prosperity has left Janesville well equipped during the lean years of the war. Without having any war orders to fill, its factories are kept busy. There is a general tone of prosperity. Janesville during the past summer has successfully staged a Fourth of July celebration, a Home Coming, a Janesville Fair, one of the best that has been held in the state thus far, and is always ready to meet any emergency. What is needed just now is a practical demonstration of the moral stick-to-it-ness by concentrating the energy on some practical and particular ideal. As a mere suggestion why not take up this park, harbor beach and recreation idea? It will be ready for actual action at once. Playgrounds, a zoo, instructive objects, boat-riding, drives, places where visitors could take their luncheon, tables and equipment and with surrounding scenery that no other city in the country could duplicate. It is feasible and it is possible.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The New York World, in its general comparative of the superiority of the democratic party and the present democratic administration, takes Mr. Hughes to task for pointing out that all of the important congressional chairmanships, save one, are held by southerners. If the republicans control the next congress, says the World, the important chairmanships will all be in the hands of southerners. And so it asks, "What's the difference?" First, assuming the World that the next congress will most certainly be controlled by the republicans and adding our congratulations to the country upon that happy outcome of the election, we will tell what's the difference between having southerners and southerners in control of the important chairmanships in congress. In the first place, southern congressmen, whatever their politics, represent somebody. They are not elected by reason of laws which forbid the right of suffrage to a large majority of the qualified electors of their districts, and they know themselves to be accountable to the whole body of their constituents and not to a little cabal of party leaders. In the second place, northern congressmen generally hail from cities and good sized towns where they have been active in business or professional life and where they have gained an insight into affairs which enables them to take more than a parental view of public questions. In the third place, northern congressmen belong to a party which stands for nationalism as against sectionalism. When they draw a tariff bill or a currency bill or a bill for the development of the internal resources of the country, they draw it upon lines which recognize the needs of all parts of the land. They are as willing to do something for cotton as they are to do something for wheat. They are a consideration of the needs of the southern planter as of the northern farmer. They legislate for the wage-earner in the cotton mills of Columbia, South Carolina, as readily as they do for the wage-earner in the cotton mills of Lowell, Massachusetts.

That is what makes the difference.

MALE STENOGRAPHERS.

The government seems to have difficulty in securing male stenographers. A recent circular states that nearly two hundred appointments are soon to be made. To get them, examinations will have to be held all over the country September 12 and 26. But while applicants for other civil service appointments are sleeping on the doorsteps of their congressmen, no rush of candidates for this position is expected. What has become of the male stenographer?

News-papers reporters are asked almost every day if they are familiar with shorthand. This is because the public conceives of a reporter as spending much of his time in taking down long reports of speeches. In actual practice the reporter soon finds that he can get down in long hand four times as much as his paper will print. Few men in this business ever find it worth their while to acquire stenography.

In mercantile and manufacturing lines few fellows consider it of any large use. To an ambitious man, knowledge of shorthand might even prove a detriment. It would tend to keep him at merely clerical work, when he ought to be out getting his hands dirty while he was learning processes and materials.

Probably the government, like private enterprises, will have to depend more and more on women for stenography. The limitations that customarily throw a peculiarly popular. There are many capable girls who would like to plunge into the heart of a business in overalls and jumpers like their brothers. But society would be shocked. They are not yet ready to defy society.

So the girls will undoubtedly monopolize this field or nearly so. They will crowd it too full, thus keeping down the rates of payment. This drives out of the business the men who ever expect to support a family. No wonder that Uncle Sam must rack the country to find his two hundred expert shorthand men.

VERDUN.

"Verdun is now entering upon its seventh month of continuous battle. Whatever strategic or tactical advantage might accrue from the capture of the place has long since passed away," says the Wall Street Journal. "When a military move does not accomplish its purpose it becomes a defeat. One must conclude, therefore, that there are other than military reasons why Germany continues to hammer away at a position whose ultimate taking would not be a military success."

"What has France that Germany wants most? Why expend resources with such prodigality if there were not something in this part of France that is coveted by the empire of blood and iron? Perhaps Bismarck's expression is the key.

"Blood it has, and is expending it without stint. Lead it has in fair amount, but not sufficient for an empire of world domination. Germany now stands second in the production of iron. The greater part of its production comes from the territory taken from France in 1871. But even with the iron producing provinces of Alsace-Lorraine shorn from her, France is still a large producer of iron and steel, standing next to Germany in that respect."

Verdun, situated on the river Meuse, which runs north, and at this point is less than seventy-five miles from what is now the German frontier but was once French Alsace-Lorraine. Here, in this narrow strip of eastern France, skirting the German border, are some of the richest iron deposits in Europe. The amount that mining engineers say lies beneath the surface is bewildering. Almost the entire French production of steel originally comes from this section.

"From the Swiss border to the North sea a boundary line, including Verdun, would add still more to Germany's possession of the sinews of war. Luxembourg is rich in iron. Northeastern France and Belgium contain much coal. Possession of the northeastern section of France, with Belgium, would increase the coal area 125 per cent. Verdun and Luxembourg would almost double Germany's potential iron output."

"Security values are affected by the question of the war's termination. Whenever Germany throws out a peace feeler on the basis of retaining all she now holds, it is to look at the Meuse. The German army's boast of invincibility is being shattered at Verdun. But behind it lies nearly all the iron of France. German militarism will not be beaten so long as it is master of the sources of steel."

"Is not the grim determination of the allies to make no peace till Germany is driven out of France based in part on this fact? And if Germany is not fighting for success at Verdun, is she not now fighting for iron, and future domination? And with the German foot upon the iron supply, will either side talk of peace?"

POLITICAL ORATORY.

The man who started out on the stump this past primary had quite a problem of psychology to tackle. He addresses a different audience than the one that used to gather. In former times a rally consisted of people accustomed to hear only one side. They usually read only one newspaper, which never printed speeches by opponents. This audience would swallow anything and cheer it.

Many of the speeches are now made on the streets or at railroad stations. The audience is from "Missouri" and demands to be shown. It will not accept half truths and unsupported assertions. If a statement is manifestly unjust, it hurts the party that makes it.

Party ties hang loose. Most people read speeches and opinions from all points of view. They know that there are good men and bad men in all parties, that each has its own weakness and makes its own typical mistakes.

And yet a speaker has to be positive. He is not called on to tell the weak points of his own case any more than is the lawyer who is addressing a jury. Perhaps the reason why political oratory seems poor nowadays is not so much that the speakers have declined in effectiveness. They have to measure up to a greater level of intelligence in their audiences.

At all hazards a speaker must seem fair. He must be a thorough student of public affairs. If so, he can find plenty of weaknesses in the record of his opponents. He can safely dwell on those to his heart's content. But the moment he makes a statement that he can't back up, the moment that he utters an unjust slur, that moment he has slammed his audience in the face and insulted its reason and discrimination.

The fact that a town is having a rousing Old Home Week celebration with midway features and side shows, does not prove that you can catch a genuine Old Resident on the grounds.

Many men say it is more economical trade off their automobile each year, but probably they save nothing except the humiliation of appearing with a last year's car.

There are many complaints about the dirty condition of paper money, but many of us are exposed to it so little that we are not worrying about the microbes.

These arbitrary railroad presidents and Brotherhood men are still talking strike, utterly ignoring the right of our leisure class to freight car transportation.

Some people were not worrying much about the food supply in case of a railroad strike, but it would be awful if the shipment of gasoline should be stopped.

The navy has been playing for hypothetical points in the annual war game, and if Secretary Daniels had his way, the refreshments were also theatrical.

Of course it is a mere accident that the threat of a railroad strike came just before an election when the politicians were susceptible to argument.

It is a pretty serious matter for the children if the grown-ups leave them unamused for thirty minutes during vacation.

So far Mexico has taken no steps to intervene and end the anarchy of labor disputes in this country, but it's about time.

No one has as yet claimed that the organization of the Red Head League had anything to do with the peace movement.

Tremendous enthusiasm for the rural credits law is manifested in the cities that expect to get a farm land bank.

It is strange how badly business goes when the boss gets home from his vacation and the stenographer goes on hers.

And, strange to say, this lady fair,
Somehow keeps nice and warm.

It seems "without a thing to wear!"

When gasoline was low.

(Synopsis of preceding chapters: Phyllis has tried all she knows to make Pertwee propose, but the bashful lad always has a rush of cold feet at the psychological moment, although the two dears are as suited to each other as two peanuts in a pod. They have many adventures in the course of Phyllis's efforts to put Pertwee in a proposing state of mind, which consist in part of falling off cliffs into raging torrents, setting her house on fire, fainting in his arms in crowded thoroughfares, and making her horse run away, but although Pertwee never fails gallantly to come to the rescue, his tongue always falters, when, holding her limp form in his arms, he essays to put all the big question. In the next to the final chapter, Phyllis, while Pertwee is waiting below to take her to a dog fight so that she may see how the other half lives, spreads butter on her bonnet strings before she joins him.)

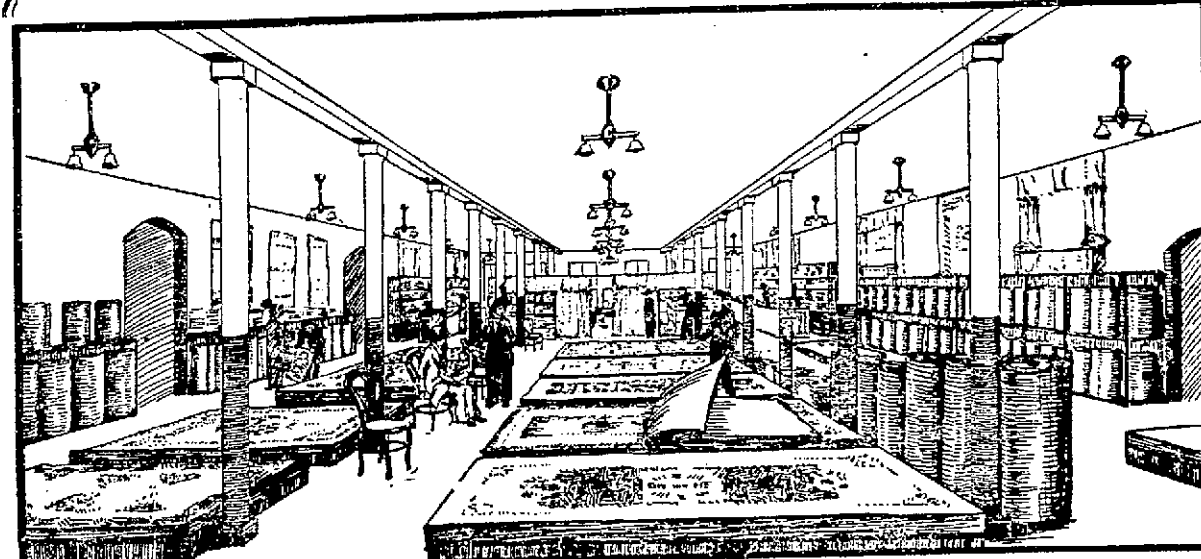

Conclusion.
"Oh, Pertwee," cried Phyllis with a becoming blush, "I've forgotten to tie my bonnet strings!"
"Meeve it to me," he said, and he tried, but the greased strings kept slipping from his fingers, till at last he cried, "I don't seem able to tie the knot."
"Perhaps you'd better call in a minister to help you," whispered Phyllis soft and low, and the next second the gallant youth had her in his arms and all was over.

NEW YORK HOTELS SHOW FAT HOW TO EAT AND GROW THIN

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Sept. 7.—The craze to reduce which has been so rampant among obese male and female New Yorkers today inspired New York hotels to cater to the seekers after slenderness with special menus.

One big hotel has employed an expert in dietetics to prepare food that can be eaten with all the recklessness of a stevedore and at the same time not endanger the embolism.

The new menus are called "Madam Menus" and across the top in quotations is the line "Eat and Grow Thin Suggestions." Here is the luncheon menu:

Cold fish, in vinegar, radishes, boiled spinach, broiled veal cutlet, onions, beets, compote of stewed fruit and assorted fresh fruit.

Dinner dishes include broiled chicken gables with mushrooms, roast lamb, chicory tomato or cucumber salad and fresh fruit compote.

UNCLE SAM STILL HAS QUARTER OF A BILLION ACRES TO GIVE AWAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, Sept. 7.—A quarter of a billion acres of public land remain in the United States to be taken over by homeseekers, Secretary of the Interior Lane announced today.

In 25 states from California to Michigan and Florida to Washington, public domains are scattered and ready to be opened. All but 2,290,000 acres lies in the far west. Nevada, with 55,375,077 acres, contains the largest area.

A dozen of the western states contain over 254,945,889 acres. Ninety-two million acres are unsurveyed. Of the 25 states containing public lands, Missouri has the least, 952 acres in 16 counties. A summary of the land:

Alabama, 42,680; Arizona, 23,597,219; California, 20,025,998; Colorado, 14,908,127; Florida, 1,35,237; Idaho, 15,510,561; Kansas, 56,018; Louisiana, 44,804; Michigan, 90,840; Minnesota, 44,804.

Old Style.

Little Jennie, a primary pupil, was asked: "If your mother had five yards of cloth and used three in making your dress, how much would she have left?" After a moment's thought she replied, "I think she'd have enough to make a petticoat."

Needed Encouragement.
Mortimer's mother had permitted him to come to the company dinner only on condition that he would not ask for any of the rich plum pudding. He looked ruefully at the dish of plain porridge before him for dessert. At length he addressed his mother in a plaintive little voice: "May I please have some sugar or sunthar just to encourage this rice a little?"

VON BERNHARDI NOW DEFENDER OF KOVEL

Gen. Friedrich von Bernhardt, who in 1912 wrote a book forecasting the present war and many of its main features, has been named by Emperor William to take charge of the German army defending Kovel. The general is one of the best known military writers of Germany and is very close to the emperor.

REV. C. J. KOERNER DIES AT JEFFERSON

Former Pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church of This City, Succumbs Early Today.

The Reverend C. J. Koerner, for more than twenty-two years pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church in this city, passed away shortly before one o'clock this morning at the home of his son, Harry Koerner, at Jefferson. The Rev. Koerner had been ill for the last three years, but was taken seriously with sciatica some seven weeks ago. A stroke of paralysis, which occurred last Saturday, hastened the end.

Mr. Koerner was born in New York City, March 8, 1846. He received his early education in New York and his theological education at Fort Wayne, Ind., and St. Louis, where he attended the Missouri Seminary. He was ordained at Whitewater, Wis., in 1872, and continued as pastor at Whitewater for eight years. His next place of service was at Helenville, Wis., where he was minister for eleven years.

In 1891 Rev. Koerner came to Janesville to become pastor of St. Paul's church which he served continuously and faithfully for twenty-two and a half years. He was an assiduous and devoted worker for the welfare of his church, and his leadership under his guidance and leadership the local church was brought to a high standard of religious and educational efficiency. He resigned his pastorate in 1912 and went to Jefferson to reside with his son.

Rev. Koerner was married January 15, 1873, to Sophia Bachmann, at Baltimore, Md. Mrs. Koerner passed away in 1905.

There were five children all of whom are living: John Koerner of Leavenworth, Wash.; Harry Koerner, of Jefferson; George Koerner, of New York City; C. Brewer, of Milwaukee; and Sophie Koerner, both of Jefferson. There also survive two sisters, Mrs. Dankworth of Milwaukee and Mrs. Meyer of St. Louis.

A man of lovable qualities and kindly nature, he enjoyed the esteem of his parishioners and fellow townsmen. He was a most ardent worker for his church and for the cause of Christianity. His passing will cause sorrow among his many friends in Janesville.

Funeral services will be held at two-thirty o'clock Saturday afternoon from the home in Jefferson and at one o'clock from St. John's Lutheran church. Burial will be at Union cemetery, Jefferson.

CLUB SUPPERS WILL CONTINUE AS USUAL

Remodeling at Country Club Will Not Interfere With Social Activities During Present Month.

There will be no interference with the plans of the house committee of the Country club to hold their social activities during the month of September as usual. The regular club suppers and bridge will be held on Tuesday of each week as usual and the cuisine department will open for use during the entire month. Friday the ladies who have enjoyed golf all summer will hold their tournament following the usual luncheon at noon.

OBITUARY.

Herman Gruel.

News has been received here of the death of Herman Gruel of Watertown yesterday noon. Mr. Gruel was born in Germany in August, 1868, but moved to America with his family seven years later. He had resided in this part of the country for the past forty-five years, living most of that time in Watertown. Throughout this long period Mr. Gruel was engaged in the railroad business and made a host of friends in every city around here. He will long be remembered for his "fable disposition and generous kindness." The deceased is survived by two sons, Earl and Charles, of Watertown, and by one daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Sterrett of Janesville, and by three brothers and a sister living in Watertown. Mr. Gruel had been sick since last February with a severe case of diabetes, but throughout the long period of confinement and suffering he was always cheerful. The funeral will be held Friday from the home in Watertown, 708 West Main street, and later from the German Lutheran church there, of which Mr. Gruel was a member.

LIGHTNING HITS SCHOOL; DOES LITTLE DAMAGE

During the severe thunderstorm that struck Janesville last night, one of the high school buildings was struck by lightning. Quite a patch of the slate roof was torn off, but the lightning passed off down the eaves and did not start a fire. The damage is covered by insurance.

When you think of insurance think of C. P. Beers. Adv.

Central Life Manager Honored

W. C. Kelley, Well Known Here, is Elected Head of Hundred Thousand Club.

W. C. Kelley, assistant state manager of the Central Life Assurance society in Wisconsin, who is in the city on the interests of his company, of which Harry E. Wemple is local manager, has the distinction of having written more insurance than any other man in the company. He has therefore been elected president of the society's Hundred Thousand Club.

Mr. Kelley's personal production of business for the first eight months of the current year is already close to a million. Mr. Wemple also has an enviable record so far and stands close to the top of the list of big producers for the company. The Central Life expects to close the year 1916 with fifty millions of business in force.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Reilly, of 418 Holmes street, announce the arrival of twin boys, born Wednesday, September 6th.

START CONSTRUCTION ON EVANSVILLE ROAD

Stretch of Two Miles in Town of Janesville, East of Leyden, Being Built by Contractor P. Gary.

Contractor P. Gary of Evansville, has started building a two mile stretch of highway on the Evansville road in the town of Janesville, starting at Leyden and extending east. Owing to the fact that the road is badly torn up with grading and to build culverts, it will be closed to traffic until it is completed. Highway Commissioner Moore announced today. All persons traveling to Evansville should take the Magnolia road out of Janesville, as Magnolia road out of the town line between Center and Janesville. West of Leyden the Evansville road is open to traffic and is in excellent condition. The stretch of highway now being built is the last piece on the Janesville-Evansville road to be constructed under the state and county aid system.

The Arion road will soon be completed. Mr. Moore stated today and will then be opened to traffic. The middle road in the town of Johnstonville is now torn up and should be avoided by motorists.

TALK CONCRETE ROAD AT MEETING FRIDAY

Janesville Men and Farmers Living on Janesville-Beloit Road Requested to Be Present.

Janesville business men, county good roads committees and others interested in the project of a concrete highway linking this city and Beloit are invited to attend the meeting to be held Friday evening at 7:45 o'clock at the Commercial club rooms. This session expects to outline its end of the proposition and reach a definite decision as to just what Janesville desires in the matter of the concrete road.

A similar meeting is to be held at Beloit for the same purpose.

County Commissioner of Highways Charles E. Moore will be present and address the meeting relative to the merits of the proposed plan. In addition to local people who would benefit from the concrete road, the highways between here and Beloit are advised to be present to give the meeting the opinion and suggestions of the rural citizen who will benefit fully as much as either businessmen of this city or Beloit.

LOANI BAND HOLDS ITS ANNUAL PICNIC

Enjoyable Time for Congregational Church Society at Country Home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Craig.

A large crowd gathered at the hospitable country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Craig on Wednesday evening and partook of a picnic lunch. The occasion was the social picnic given annually by the Loani Band. About seventy members of the band and their families were invited as guests of club members. The bountiful menu was served under the direction of Mrs. Butler. Mrs. Fred Palmer and Miss Leona Casford. The trip was made by automobiles and was very enjoyable on account of the good roads and fine moonlight.

After luncheon had been disposed of a short program was given in the parlors. The pastor, Rev. Ewing, told a fish story, inspired by his recent camping experiences, which evoked much merriment. Mrs. Hayden, a guest of Mrs. Richard Valentine, gave a delightful series of interpretative readings which had for their subjects "Grand Opera," "Southern Sketches" and "My Irish Neighbor."

The regular meetings of the band will begin in about two weeks, when the program for the winter's study will be taken up. The president of the organization is Miss Leora Westlake and the secretary is Miss Frances Ryckman.

HOW DOCTORS HAVE CHANGED

Fewer Whiskers and Frock Coats and Less Mystery About Them Than Formerly.

Formerly the doctor had to wear sideburns or a Van Dyke, else he was under suspicion of being frivolous. A frock coat was a part of his disguise. He exhaled an odor of strong drugs. He rubbed his hands and shook his head as a part of every bedside diagnosis.

He was a good doctor, too, in many ways, and his helpful sympathy and his unflinching service to his patients, whom he cherished as few physicians cherish theirs in this day when every family is likely to patronize a dozen specialists, endeared him to the community.

Patients and their troubles are now often a matter of card indexing and of very exact courses of treatment. "Social medicine" is slowly doing away with the charity practice which every physician once carried on for the benefit of his own soul. The public is being taken into the confidence of its healers, and so rapidly do popular magazines spill forth news of the latest advances that it is an astute practitioner who can converse on all the medical topics brought up by those who enter his consultation room.

The doctor is more a scientist, more of a business man, less of a sage and oracle. But we still have that happy, childlike trust in him as in the days when pneumonia was a signal for barred windows and when cool water was regarded as a deadly thing when taken internally by a fever victim.—Detroit News.

A Fruit-Picking Harness.

A help to the fruit picker has been devised consisting of broad straps or suspenders to which the fruit basket or pail is hung by metal hooks in front of the operator, leaving the hands free for picking. Equipped with this harness the picker goes about his task with ease, placing the fruit in the receptacle in front of him. He does not need to worry about its getting away from him, as the old pail hanging on the tree branch often did, and he can strip a tree clean of its fruit in much less time with this new contrivance.

No Compromise.

Luke was weighted down with a pair of feet of a size remarkable even for a man of his color in the polychrome of human kind. As he was sitting one day engaged in the game of chance which has to do with cubes of bone with black dots upon their sides, Sam approached. In his preoccupation, Sam trod upon the foot of Luke and remained planted there. Luke turned upon him indignantly. "Git off dat foot," he commanded. "Git off. Git all de way off!"

Asters and Grapes.

A birthday celebration in a country cottage took place when the purple asters grew in profusion by the roadsides. The day called for a birthday cake, and for decorations for the table. The asters furnished the latter, and their lovely tint suggested the coloring for the cake. This was procured by the use of grape juice. The bottled juice was used, being added a little at a time to a beaten icing of white of egg and sugar. When the cake was put on the table it was surrounded by a wreath of asters.

A Fact as to Editors.

On rainy days, and also on other occasions which are not unconnected with the postman's visits, we find the whole of a truth in this from the Thomastown (Ga.) Times: If you see an editor who pleases everybody, there will be a glass plate over his face and he will not be standing up. —Collier's Weekly.

WOMAN'S PAGE

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am thirteen years of age and enter high school this September. Is it all right to walk home from school with boys? Would it be all right for me to go to the picture show with my boy friend?

(2) If you met a boy accidentally and he wanted to get you a soda and take you home, what would you say?

(3) Is it all right to go ice skating in the winter with a boy?

(4) I loaned a girl friend of mine a book two months ago and she has not returned it. What shall I do?

(5) Will tam o'shanter be in style this summer?

(6) Is it all right to give a valentine to a boy on Valentine's day?

(7) I got a box of candy from a boy at Christmas time and I kept it. Should I have returned it?

(8) I have a large mole on my arm. How can I get rid of it?

(9) Am I too young to wear my hair on my head?

POLLY, A CURIOUS GIRL.

(1) It is all right to walk with boys who live in the neighborhood or go in the same direction, but it is silly to let boys take you home if they have to go out of their way to do so.

(2) You are too young to go to a picture show at night with a boy.

(3) If he were a boy of my acquaintance I would say, "All right."

(4) Yes, I believe young people should get all the out of door exercise they can.

(5) Ask the girl if she is through with the book. Say that you want it if she is.

(6) Yes, they will be.

(7) I would be silly to do so. Let him give a valentine to you.

(8) You should not have returned

(9) Have it removed with the electric needle. It is the only safe way.

(10) You are too young to do up your hair.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have heavy black hair and it is so dry that it is turning gray. What shall I do for it? Is coconut oil good for the hair?

WARRIOR.

Vaseline is perhaps better than anything else for dry hair. It should be carefully massaged into the scalp and not allowed to get on the hair. This can be done by making a series of parts.

Your hair does not keep its natural color when the scalp is in better condition you might apply sage tea. It is a harmless coloring lotion made by steeping gently in ounces each of green tea and dried sage in three quarts of water until only two quarts are left. When reduced in this manner it must stand for twenty-four hours then strain the liquid through a fine cloth. More than one application of this is required to get the best effects, and a small brush or fine comb that will not get on the hair evenly will be best.

The tea does not keep long without souring. This stain will be useless if the hair has not been previously washed and dried before the coloring material is put on the hair. The least trace of grease prevents the dye from adhering. For this reason it is some times necessary to put a little soda or ammonia in the rinsing water.

I have never heard of using coconut oil for the hair.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl fourteen years old. Am I too young to go with boys four years older than I am?

PEGGIE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: A boy said he would call me up the other evening and he did not and he hasn't yet. What should I do when he does call up?

Talk to him as though you had forgotten he said he was going to phone you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: When going to a picture show who should walk first when going down the aisle, the boy or the girl?

The girl.

Household Hints

FRESH PINEAPPLE FOR OCCASIONS.

Take a very fine ripe pineapple, pare it and cut out carefully all the eyes; then with a silver fork strip all the pulp from the core. To one pint of this add one and one-fourth pounds of lump or crushed sugar and stir occasionally until all the sugar is dissolved. Put in glass fruit jars and screw down the covers as tight as possible.

This keeps a long time and is delicious.

HONEY TO KEEP WITHOUT CANDYING.

To keep honey all the year round without candying it is only necessary to place the honey, which has been strained previously, in a pan or pail, which may be placed inside of another one, putting two or three biscuits to prevent it from burning upon the bottom. Then fill the outer one with water and just bring it to the boiling point, skimming off the wax and foam which gather upon the top. As soon as it comes to the boiling point remove from stove and after a few minutes skim and pour into jars to cool. Cover tightly and place in a cool cellar. It will pay for the trouble.

CHUTNEY SAUCE.

Select twelve green, sour apples, two green peppers, six green tomatoes, four small onions, one cup seeded raisins, one quart of vinegar (if strong, dilute), two tablespoons mixed spices, two tablespoons salt and two cups brown sugar.

Remove seeds from peppers, add tomatoes and onions, chopped fine; raisins, spices, sugar, salt and vinegar. Put on and let simmer slowly for about three-fourths hour. Then add the apples and cook until they are tender, but not mushy. Put in bottles and seal. Delicious relish for meats.

MEXICAN PICKLES.

Select four quarts green tomatoes, six large peppers, three onions, all chopped fine. Put a layer of this mixture in an earthen jar, then a layer of salt, alternately, and let remain overnight. Then drain the water off, and add one tablespoon each of peppercorns, mustard seed and whole cloves. Simmer the whole for two hours in three pints of good vinegar, and set away in a cool place. After three weeks pour off the vinegar and add as much fresh. In another week the pickles will be ready for use.

THE TABLE.

Rice and Mushroom Croquettes—Peel and cut one-half pound mushrooms into small pieces, add two level spoons butter and simmer, covered, for thirty minutes. Add one-half of a cup of rice, one teaspoonful of finely chopped onion, a pinch of salt, one pint of water and a dash of good vinegar, and set away in a cool place. After three weeks pour off the vinegar and add as much fresh. In another week the pickles will be ready for use.

Mayonnaise Dressing—Two eggs, one cup vinegar, one scant cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon mustard, pepper to taste, butter size of walnut. Allow this to boil two minutes, then add one tablespoon cornstarch. Let boil and add one-half cup cream.

Pear and Fig Filling for Cake—Three-fourths pound figs, two and one-half pounds white sugar, three pounds pears of nice flavor and quite ripe. Weigh pears after peeled and cored. Chop in food chopper, add a little water to cook until soft, then add figs (which should also be chopped fine), add sugar and stir slowly, stirring often until very thick. I like to seal mine right up in pint fruit cans. Use for cake filling or, for a change when baking cookies, roll this with small cutters and spread filling between two cookies and bake. Delicious. Some extract of vanilla added is good.

Tea Cakes—One cup sugar, scant half cup butter, one egg, two-thirds cup milk, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder, a little lemon extract, two cups flour.

PREVENTS SCRATCHES.

To prevent scratching from bumping porch rail, get rubber headed tacks at any 10-cent store and place four or five along edge of rail where swinging would otherwise touch and mar.

ONE DIVORCE TO EVERY THREE WEDDINGS IN OHIO; WIVES' FAULT SAYS REPORT

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 7.—For every three marriages in Ohio last year, at least one divorce suit was started.

For every six marriages, one divorce was granted by Ohio courts and one marriage annulled.

These figures will be cited in the forthcoming report of Secretary of State Charles Q. Hildebrand, soon to be filed with Governor Willis, it was learned here today.

Ten years ago Ohio had only one divorce to every 12 marriages. Annual reports of the former secretaries show plainly the divorce evil is gaining ground in Ohio married life.

Hildebrand's report shows it is the wife and not the husband, as generally it is supposed, who soon tires of the marriage bond.

For example: Exactly 299 divorces were granted husbands last year, the grand total of their wives had been unfaithful. Only 196 wives were granted divorces from husbands charged with forgetting their marriage vows.

However, it is the husband who shirks married responsibility first according to the report. Exactly 3014 divorces were granted wives last year for "abandonment and neglect," as against 2854 granted husbands for the same reason.

Hildebrand's report shows that June still holds good as the month of marriages and that January is the month that Cupid languishes.

Of the 48,260 marriages reported for the year, 5820 were solemnized in June, while January's record was only 2876.

FOURTEEN YEAR OLD GIRL WHO ELOPED, IS LOCATED

Madison, Wis., Sept. 7.—Carrie Reynolds, the fourteen year old girl, who ran off with Louis Ragan, a Greek, was located in Gary, Ind., yesterday and will be brought back to Madison either today or tomorrow. Papers have been made out by District Attorney Harry Southard for the return of the girl and a complaint will probably be filed under the Mann act. They left Madison on Aug. 20 and the family have since been making appeals to police all over the country for the apprehension of the girl.

MOLDING OUR MINDS

Judge the nature of our "brain-garden" before we are long in the presence of others.

A friend of mine has a plan to overcome her unworthy thoughts which should work excellently. Every night, after she has turned down the light and is lying in the still dusk of her room, she goes over her thoughts of the day as carefully as possible.

At first it was hard work—this trying to remember her many thoughts, but gradually they have become quite easy to remember, and it is now a simple task to pick out the idle ones.

This money is placed in a small bank and at the end of a specified time it goes to some charity.

This seems an excellent plan to me and since I have tried it in my own life, the unworthy thoughts have become far less in number, while the worthy ones seem to have increased.

At first, to be sure, not a little money was put in the box, but gradually the coins are becoming fewer, and I hope to have them nil some day not far distant.

Our mind influences our dispositions, character, and last but not least our countenance. If we are inclined to be unkind, our face shows thoughts of a degrading nature, our face plainly show it, and one may

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE HEART AND ATHLETICS.

Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, professor of physical education in the University of Pennsylvania and a great advocate of college athletics, tested 265 young men in normal health and found heart murmurs present in 77 of them after moderate exercise. Yet he attributed little significance to these murmurs.

He rather argued that the fact should make physicians a little more cautious in giving an unfavorable opinion upon murmurs are found following severe strain or fatigue. This, we think, is good science. McKenzie states that even after the severest athletic strain measurable injury of the heart can seldom be found after a week in a man under thirty years of age. Over thirty, athletic contests become a more serious matter.

In America we are too much interested in athletics and not enough interested in sport. The distinction should be clear: Athletics involves strenuous performances which tax the capacities of the organism, the capacity of a professional "trainer," and intended to win the applause of the multitude. Sport implies the combination of a healthy spirit of pleasure with exercise. Professional baseball and football are examples of athletics; rowing, boxing, fencing, tennis, golf and home tumbling are sport. Compulsory physical education in the public schools will improve sport and put a damper on athletics. This is what the nation needs.

There are two abuses of athletics which parents and physicians should warn their children against. The "trainer" with his beefsteak-muscle delusions and other unphysiological ideas thinks well of them. In the first place, high school and college boys should not be permitted to indulge in such strenuous contests as football and running races after a few short weeks of alleged training, because this sudden strain often brings on heart trouble which handicaps the young man for years afterward.

In the next place, a college man who is to enter some sedentary occupation on leaving school ought to cultivate some of the sports—rowing, fencing, boxing, tennis, something which will keep him from going stale when he leaves school and takes no further part in athletics, something too, which will gain him admission into social circles which might otherwise be closed to him. When a young man suddenly leaves off athletic work and settles down to a life of indolence or physical inactivity, his heart, being an athlete's heart, runs wild, like a flywheel with the belt thrown off, and nothing but regular exercise will overcome the trouble.

Sport is the brain worker's tonic. Without it his mind eventually goes stale and his work proves it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Law is Law.

Some time ago when my wife asked you if of this city, was a competent man for the treatment of pelvic trouble you replied that he was not even legally licensed to practice in this state. This surprised us, for he stands high socially. But on investigation we find you are correct, and we thank you for the advice. But if a man is permitted under the law to practice regardless of the fact that he is not legally qualified, what is a stranger to do when he needs the services of a physician?

ANSWER.—About ten per cent of "doctors" in many towns have no legal right to practice, but the law never interferes unless the legally licensed practitioners force action.

Yeast versus Baking Powder.

Is Graham bread, raised with baking powder, as healthful as when raised with yeast? Is citric acid (made from lemons) as healthful as lemon juice in salads, etc? If so, what proportion of acid and water should be used?

ANSWER.—Yes. 2. Perhaps, but we have a preference for the original juice. 3. A teaspoonful of powdered or granular citric acid in a cup of water would be about right.

The Bread and Milk Club.

Please state the amount of bread and milk one should take each Monday in the Bread and Milk Club. ANSWER.—Not more than a glass of milk every two hours all day, and a cracker or one-fourth slice of bread.

BLIND BOYS AND GIRLS TO SWIM AND ROLLERSKATE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Columbus, O., Sept. 7.—Boys at the Ohio Institution for the Blind are to learn to swim and the girls are to take up roller skating. Both these pastimes are new additions to the variety of outdoor sports at the school.

An outdoor swimming pool 35 by 72 feet, ranging in depth from two and one-half to seven feet, is being constructed. A rectangular roller rink for the girls, also under construction, will serve two purposes. In addition to skating facilities, it encloses a play area, 80 by 100 feet, free from all obstructions.

CHAPTER XXV.

Adoree Demarest, still in her glittering, hybrid costume, but heavy-limbed and dull with fatigue, paused outside her own door early that morning. The time before her perhaps an hour of dawn, the street outside and the building itself were silent, yet from Adoree's parlor issued the sound of light fingers upon piano keys. A large entered, and found Campbell Pope, with collar loosened and hair on end, seated at the instrument. "The air within the room was blue and reeking with the odor of stale tobacco smoke, and the ash receptacle at his elbow was piled high with burnt offerings."

Pope rose at Adoree's entrance, crying her anxiously, "Is everything all right?" he asked.

"Is what all right?"

"The old—Lorelei?"

"Yes, good. What are you doing here?"

"I suppose I must apologize. You see, I came here to wait and—and help."

"You decided to—help?" Adoree asked the disheveled musician queerly.

"You've helped to break my lease—I'll be shown out of this house sure."

Pope shuddered, guiltily. "I was playing for Bob and Lorelei."

"With one glove half off, Adoree slowly seated herself, showing in her face an amazement that increased the man's embarrassment. Pope took a deeper breath, then burst out:

"Oh, I have a sixty-horse power imagination, and it seems to me that music is a sort of—prayer; anyhow, it's the only way I know of praying. Good music is divine language. In my own way I was sort of praying for those two children. Foolish, isn't it? I'm sorry I told you. It sounds nutty to me when I stop to consider it."

Pope stared moodily under Adoree's heavily speckled eyes. "Lorelei's all right?"

"Adoree looked. "It's a boy." There was a moment of silence. "Did you ever see a baby-know baby?"

"Mushy, no?"

Miss Demarest's gaze remained bent upon Pope, but it was focused upon great distance; her voice when she spoke was hushed and awe-stricken. "Neither did I until this one. I held it! I held it in my arms—Oh—I was frightened, and yet I seemed to know just what to do and—and everything. It was strange. It hurt me terribly, for, you see, I didn't know what babies meant until tonight. Now I know."

Pope saw the shining eyes suddenly fill and threaten to overflow; instead of the passionately overdone and artificial stage favorite he beheld only a young woman whose face was softened and glorified as by a vision.

"I didn't know you cared for children."

Adoree shrugged, the beads at her throat clattered furiously. "Neither did I, but I suppose every woman does if she only knows it. Tonight I began to understand what this ache inside of me means." Her gaze came back and centered upon his face, but it was frightened and pained-stricken. "I've suffered all my right to children."

"How can you say—"

"You know it as well as I do!" A soft waver in the speaker's cheeks, then Bob, looking her white and weary. "You, of all men, must understand. The notorious, I'm a painted woman, a wicked woman—the wickedest woman in the land—and that reputation will live in spite of anything I can do." She began to cry now in a way strange to Pope's experience.

Pope's habitual restraint all at once gave way. "Non-sense!" he exploded. "The thing that counts is what you are, not what you seem to be. I know the truth."

Now there was nothing sufficiently significant about those words to bring a light of wonderment and gladness to the girl's face, but her tears ceased as abruptly as they had commenced, and noting the slowly growing radiance of her expression, Campbell was stricken dumb with fright at the possible consequences of temerity. The knowledge of his shortcomings robbed him of confidence and helped to confuse him.

Adoree rose. For a moment she stood looking at him, with a peculiar, tender smile, then took him by the lapels of his shapeless coat and drew his thin face down to hers.

"I'm not going to let you back out," she declared, firmly. "You asked me, didn't you?"

"Adoree! No, no! Think what you are doing," he cried, sharply.

But she continued to smile up into his eyes with a gladness that intoxicated him.

She snuggled closer to him, murmuring, cooily: "I don't want to think—we'll have plenty of time to think when we're too old to talk. Now, I just want to love you as hard as you have been loving me for the last six months."

To all young fathers there comes a certain readjustment of values. To Bob, who had always led a selfish, thoughtless existence, it was at first bewildering to discover that his place at the head of his household had been usurped by another. Heretofore he had always been of supreme domestic importance, but now the order of things was completely reversed, if not hopelessly jumbled. First in consequence came this new person, tiny and vastly tyrannical because of his helplessness, then the nurse, an awesome person—a sort of oracle and regent combined—who ruled in the name and stead of the new heir. Lorelei herself occupied no mean station in the new scheme, for at least she shared the confidence of the nurse and the doctor, and ranked above the cook and the housemaid, but not so Bob. Somewhere at the foot of the list he found his own true place.

Now, strange to say, this novel arrangement was extremely agreeable to the deposed ruler. Bob took a shameless delight in doing menial service; to fetch and to carry for all hands filled him with joy. But once outside of the premises he reassessed himself, and his importance grew as gas expands. Before long his intimate friends began to avoid him like a plague. It was his partner, Kurtz, who finally dubbed him "The pestilence that stalketh in darkness and the destruction that wasteth out noontides."

One day, after Bob had acquired sufficient confidence in himself and in the baby to handle it without anxiety to the nurse, he begged permission to show it to the hallux downstairs. He returned greatly elated, explaining that the attendant, who had some impossible number of babies of his own and might therefore be considered an authority, declared this one to be the finest he had ever beheld. Oddly enough, this praise delighted Bob out of all reason. He remained in a state of suppressed excitement all that day, and on the following afternoon he again kidnapped the child for a second exhibition. It seemed that the infant's fame spread rapidly, for soon the tenants of neighboring apartments began to clamor for a sight of it, and Bob was only too eager to gratify them. Every afternoon he took his son downstairs with him, until finally Lorelei checked him as he was going out.

"Bob, dear," she said, with the faintest shadow of a smile. "I don't think it's good for him to go out so often. Why don't you ask your father and mother to come up?"

Wharton flushed, then he stammered. "I—what makes you—er—think—"

"Why, I guessed it the very first day." Lorelei's smile saddened. "They needn't see me, you know."

Bob laid the child back in its bed. "But that's just what they want. They want to see you, only I wouldn't let you be bothered. They're perfectly foolish over the kid; mother cries, and father—but just wait." He rushed out of the room, and in a few moments returned with his parents.

Hannibal Wharton was deeply embarrassed, but his wife went straight to Lorelei and, bending over her chair, placed a kiss upon her lips. "There," said she. "When you are stronger I'm going to apologize for the way we've treated you. We're old people. We're selfish and suspicious and unreasonable, but we're not entirely unhuman. You won't be too hard on us, will you?"

The old lady's eyes were shining, the palms which were clasped over Lorelei's hand were hot and tremulous. The look of hungry yearning that greeted the older woman's words was ample answer, and with a little choking cry she gathered the weak figure into her arms and thrilled as she felt the amber head upon her breast.

Hannibal trumpeted into his handkerchief, then cleared his throat premonitory, but Bob forestalled him with a happy laugh. "Don't hold any post-mortems, dad. Lorelei knows everything you intend to say."

"I'm blamed if she does," rumbled the old man, "because I don't know myself. I'm not much on apologies; I can take 'em, but I can't make 'em."

His voice rose sternly: "Young lady, the night that 'baby' was born, I stood outside this house for hours because I was afraid to come in. And my feet hurt like the devil, too. I wouldn't lose that much sleep for the whole steel trust; but I didn't dare go back to the hotel, for mother was waiting, and I was afraid of her, too. I don't intend to go through another night like that."

Bob's mother turned to her son, saying: "She is beautiful, and she is good, too. Anybody can see that. We could love her for what she has done for you, if for nothing else."

"Well, I should say so," proudly vaunted the son. "She took a chance when she didn't care for me, and she made me into a regular fellow. Why, she reformed me from the ground up. I've sworn off every blessed thing I used to do."

"Including drinking?" gruffly queried the father.

"Yes."

Lorelei smiled her slow, reluctant smile at the visitors, and her voice was gentle as she said: "He thinks he has, but it's hard to stop entirely, and you mustn't blame him if he forgets himself occasionally. You see, drinking is mostly a matter of temperament, after all. But he is doing splendidly, and some day perhaps—"

MAKING THE BLUE PRINT FOR THE FIRST PIE

PIES—Continued

"The topic to-day will be 'The Infinite Variety of Pie Fillings.'"

We have treated of pie crusts, the advantages of round pies over rectangular pies; we have paid tribute to the mind that thought up the circular pie; to-day we shall go into the pie, as it were, and discuss its interior. A broad subject you will say, and you are right, but we shall sketch through it hurriedly, and our article will be well worth reading to the end.

The creator of the pie was a man of vision. He said first "I will make a round pie that will do for any number of people." Then he said to himself, "What shall I put inside the pie?"

He gave this a great deal of thought.

Finally, after a couple of days of reflection, he said to himself, "Why isn't this a subject that I can leave to my public? Why shouldn't I be content to dictate the general plans for pie and let each individual express himself or herself as to what shall go into his or her pie? I shall simply provide an ample hollowiness. Then, be it gooseberries or pumpkin, apples or raisins, that shall the individual decide for himself. Yes, this is a very good place for me to withdraw. I am the father of the pie plan; that is enough. I shall put my finger in the pie no further."

He thought this last was a very good joke; he was an inventor and scientist, so we shall let it pass.

But do we not have here an example of great and remarkable broadmindedness? For weeks and weeks this man's idea for pies had been his whole life, yet we find him realizing the exact point at which he should withdraw himself.

This is the thought that we wanted to bring out; how this great man put himself in the background and erased his own personality, so that the pie might become a universal dish and not the pleasure of a few.

Bob's sake?" pleaded the old lady, timidly.

"I intend to love you both very dearly," shyly returned the girl, and, noting the light in Lorelei's face, Bob Wharton was satisfied.

Restraint vanished swiftly under the old couple's evident determination to make amends, but after they had gone Lorelei became so pensive that Bob said, anxiously, "I hope you weren't polite to them merely for my sake."

Lorelei shook her head. "No. I was only thinking—Do you realize that none of my own people have been to see me? That I haven't had a single word from any of them?"

Bob stirred uncomfortably; he started to speak, then checked himself as she went on, not without some effort: "I'm going to say something unpleasant, but I think you ought to know it. When they learn that your parents have taken me in and made up with us, they're going to ask me for money. It's a terrible thing to say, but it's true."

"Do you want to see them? Do you want them to see the baby?"

"No." Lorelei was pale as she made answer. "Not after all that has passed."

Dinner Stories

An Irishman passed a shop where a notice was displayed saying that everything was sold by the yard. Thinking to play a joke on the shopman, he entered and asked for a yard of milk.

The shopman, not in the least abashed, dipped his finger in a bowl of milk and drew a line a yard long on the counter.

The Irishman, not wishing to be caught in his own trap, asked the price.

"Five cents," said the shopman. "All right. Roll it up; I'll take it."

For the first time in his life the un- intellectual man had been lured into a museum. Among the scientific treasures shown him by his intellectual friend was a case full of stuffed birds. There was one specimen that rather interested him. He asked what it was, and was told that it was a cassowary.

"I have heard of the cassowary," said the un- intellectual man, "but this is not my idea of it."

"Perhaps not," said his friend, "but it is God's idea."

For some reason the Sunday school class had become intensely interested in Methuselah, and at their urgent request the teacher related all the authentic information recorded in the various anecdotes gleaned from less reliable sources.

In conclusion she said: "Now, is there any further question as to the primary ballot?"

St. Louis may take POLITICAL PARTIES OUT OF MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] St. Louis, Sept. 7.—Whether St. Louis' municipal elections shall continue under the present partisan political system, will be decided by the voters when they cast their ballots in the general elections in November.

Mayor Kiel recently signed a bill passed by the Board of Aldermen, St. Louis' legislative body, giving voters a chance to decide a clause to the city charter, which would eliminate all party designation from the primary ballot. Thus a citizen could

FINE FIELDING HELP TO RUSSELL; SOX WIN

Reb in Several Tight Holes Yesterday With Indians, But Mates Give Him Support and Victory.

The White Sox continued to step two and a half inches behind Boston yesterday when they took a well-earned victory from Cleveland, 4-3. Joe Jackson's three base blow in the eighth inning saved Russell from the pinch, and the Indians who drew awful close and would have run out for Jackson's blow in the at-bat-inning. Russell was ordered to the field line trench when an early at-bat with his umpire brought him retirement. With Weaver in the lead, the Sox were over on the field line. Hasbrook, a recent from the Central league, was ordered on the field line in place of Foulger and held his position under all the stalling, high, low and wide ones with confidence. He drew ones with confidence, the winning run as far as sound.

The Sox disposed of three Cleveland pitchers, including Foulger and Weaver, and secured two hits. The Indians drew eleven safe hits off Russell and but for some mighty fielding the Sox would have been on the shores end of the count.

HARVARD FOOTBALL TEAM STARTS PRACTICE TODAY

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 7.—With Eddie Mahan for the team by graduation, and with such stars as Don Wallace, Frank Gentry, Roy Wilson, Ken Larson, Dick King and Ross Cowan also gone by the same route, Harvard's 1916 football squad trotted onto the field today for its first full workout.

The team perhaps knew of the men who started in the game last fall in which the Harvard team lost against Yale, will be in the lineup this fall. Captain Hal Dandane, guard, and Dick Hart, end, were on the field today and Ray Bates, who withdrew last winter from college, has sent word that he will be back.

Field Coach Lou Elmore will be in charge of the squad along with Perry Houghton, who is president of the Boston National League baseball club, can leave his duties in Boston and get here at once.

TUB SPENCER OF DETROIT ONE OF FEW TO COME BACK

DETROIT, Sept. 7.—Tub Spencer is the greatest example in baseball of what perseverance will do. Once a big leaguer and renowned as a great catcher, he was stricken with illness and a fondness for the bottle. He completely disappeared from the game and then one day popped up in the Pacific coast league. He steadily developed, kept away from the night life and now is with Detroit, catching some great games. He is one of the few to come back and make a good job of it.

Peter Dink Mack of the Cardinals probably is out for the season with a sprain. He sprained a hard drive from the bat at Forbes in the final game of the series with the Giants in St. Louis recently. His injury upsets Manager Higgins' calculations regarding pitchers for the rest of the season.

MORRIS MILLER

The St. Louis Cardinals announce the purchase of Third Baseman Fred Smith from St. Paul. Smith, who formerly was with the Boston Braves, but was released because of failure to hit and then jumped to the bat in the Association this season.

A queer story comes from out of the camp of the New York Giants. It is that whatever the situation in the game John McGraw has told Benny Kauff he must hunt at least twice every day. Doubtless Kauff thinks it is part of a conspiracy to keep him from busting all slugging records, but McGraw says it is part of a plan to teach Benny how to bat.

Connie Mack was doing a little scouting on his own hook. He was in Newark to look at a certain player who may some day develop as a rum, but of a world's championship team. Connie's Athletics were playing New York and had taken a doubleheader the day before from the Yankees. Connie was sitting with a friend in the Newark grandstand.

"Let's go to the press box and see what the Athletics are doing," suggested the friend.

"No, no, you go," said Mack. "You go look at 'em. I'm afraid I might suffer a nervous shock."

The friend went and came back with the information that the A's were getting a good beating. As he broke the news as gently as he could to Mack, the leader of the Philadelphia Athletics said, with a great sigh of relief:

"That's all right. I was afraid the boys had lost their heads. Now I

OLD GIANTS FEW AS LARRY DOYLE GOES

Larry Doyle.

Larry Doyle who has left the Giants in the Zimmerman deal is one of the last of the old Giant crew that was the terror of the league for many seasons and won five pennants under Muggsy McGraw. Larry had been with the Giants for ten years and had lots to do with winning the pennant three seasons straight—1911, 1912 and 1913. Meyers, Marquard, Matty and Merkle are others of the old stars who have gone.

know everything's all right again." And then Connie turned to the playing field and asked: "Look at that fellow who does he hit 'em that way all the time?"

There may have been better catchers than Connie Mack, but none any fatter. Connie was with the Pirates in 1933 when he played a little trick on Captain Anson that won a ball game for Pittsburgh, so runs an old story. Ad Gumbert who pitched for the Pirates and got himself into a hole. Chicago filled the bases in a hurry before two were out. The Cap came to bat. In those days Anson was a terror to pitchers. He had a way of taking two strikes and laying on the third for fare-youell. So the situation was serious. Gumbert floated two across the plate and Cap did not move. Suddenly Connie stepped aside after tossing the ball back to wiped his brow. Then he threw his glove on the ground and started taking off his chest protector. Anson, who looked around and was amazed, "What's the matter, Connie," he inquired, "ain't I going to get my crack at the ball?" As he spoke Mack signaled to Gumbert and the latter whipped a fast one across. "Third strike, and out," yelled the umpire.

HE FINDS BASEBALL A SERIOUS BUSINESS

Clyde Williams, the White Sox southpaw, thought baseball was a lark when he first went into fast company and he didn't behave very well. The Tigers sent him to the coast, but since his return to Chicago he's discovered that pitching good ball is serious business, so he married the girl he liked and worked at the game in earnest. And this season he's been winning a good percentage of his games.

The St. Louis Browns get an almost perfect fielder in Lawrence Yardley of McAlester. Averages of the Western Association recently showed that he made but two errors in ninety games. In ninety games he had caught more than 200 fly balls and had thirty assists, indicating that the youngster has a throwing arm.

News that various ex-Federal club organizations were going to sue the national commission for the money promised them if they would get out of baseball caused a good deal of national laughter. In the first place since the ex-Fed clubs have claimed, when a player attempted to sue them on a contract of contention, being defunct, how could they, being defunct, sue as organizations? In the second place, how could they sue the national commission, which has no legal substance?

Al Walters, the Yankee backstop, helped to win three pennants in three previous years in baseball. He was with the flag-winning Saskatoon club of the Western Canada league in 1912 and 1914, and last year he assisted Waco to the Texas league golf.

CHIEF JOHNSON ON WARPATH; GOOD PITCHER BUT LIGHTS LURE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Chief Johnson, the Indiana pitcher, who was with Cincinnati and then hopped to the Reds, thereby becoming the bone of contention between the Reds and organized baseball, again is in the limelight. He has strayed from the narrow path of the Vernon Pacific Coast league club has been with him with suspension. Johnson's career has been of the proverbial checkered kind, but he still has it in him to become a great pitcher if he will stick to training.

BRITAIN PLANS SOCIALISTIC REFORMS AFTER THE WAR

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
London, Sept. 7.—Great Britain is preparing reforms after the war. Before the war, the cabinet, which has been in the cabinet, striking the balance between the poverty and the wealth.

Premier Asquith is a leading advocate of a new social era for Britain, those in close touch with the prime minister's views.

The Prime Minister's first intimation of the government's plan made in the house of commons during the recent discussion of the Paris Conference resolutions. Asquith declared the government has in view certain reforms which would distribute the fruits of industry more evenly over the community.

From influential sources it is known that a tentative measure is being discussed giving the state comprehensive control over the distribution of profits, preventing it, is hoped, the accumulation of vast fortunes in a few hands and guaranteeing to the worker a wage equal to or more than that paid to workmen anywhere.

AUTHORITIES SCOUR LONDON FOR SHIRKERS FROM ARMY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
London, Eng., Sept. 7.—Reputations now being taken by the recruiting authorities to examine the floating population in London in lodging houses and elsewhere for the purpose of finding shirkers from army service. Calls are being made at private houses for the same purpose. The shirkers are said to form a small minority, but there are believed to be enough of them in London alone to make up an army corps.

JANESVILLE HIGH STARTS FOOTBALL

Coaches Issue an Urgent Call for Men—Existence of Schedule Depends Upon Interest Shown.

At a meeting last night of those interested in football at the high school tentative plans for the season were outlined by the coaches. Everett B. Keck who was coach of the basketball team last year and Mr. Philip who recently was graduated from the University of Wisconsin and has had considerable football experience there, will serve as the coaching staff this season. Guy Curtis who was coach of the team that two years ago got second place in the state, will assist with the coaching and will be the business manager of the team.

At the meeting last night there were fifty-five men out for practice. As present we have a tentative schedule arranged with Madison, Beloit, Edgerton, and other towns," said Mr. Sheaf, "but this schedule and, in fact, the very existence of the team, depends entirely upon the boys themselves. If they show the right kind of spirit, if they come out for the team, attend practice regularly and do all in their power to help the team then there is no reason why the schedule should not be followed out as planned, and we hope followed out with success for the Janesville team."

Mr. Keck declared that the prospects looked bright enough now, but was very earnest in his desire to have everybody out for practice. "Nothing that nothing will happen to kill the football season here is one thing," said Coach Keck, "and getting out and working to prevent its death is another. That's what we want. We want very men out there on that field for football or not, come out; the coaches can soon determine whether or not you will be worth working on. There are about six or seven of last year's team back headed by Capt. Cober, quarterback. This bunch will serve as a nucleus to work with. Then there are two new men from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, one of these was all state half on the team that held the state championship for two years. There is a good husky looking bunch of freshmen, so if they will get out, there is no reason why we should not be able to develop a team that will amount to something."

The first practice of the season was scheduled for this afternoon at the Fourth Ward park.
